And Mexican patriotism has ample opportunity for exercise, for the political celebrations number nineteen, one of them being the 22d of February, the anniversary of the birthday of Washington; while among the lower classes the religious observation of the lower ten thousand is just such as one would expect to find if he were set down in the time of the Inquisition. At Paso del Norte one may see on any Sabath day the rituals of old Spain over again. As one approaches the church there, said to be about three bundred years old, he notices that all who pass the house raise their hats. People are passing in and out all the time. Inside are threy or forty people, men, women and children, all with uncovered heads. There are no seats, and the poople are kneeling in line about thirty feet from the door. Fifty feet farther on toward the pulpit are two upright boxes, having something of the appearance of bookcases stood up against the wall on either from the door of the confessions. power at Casas Grandes and build a four or ten-ton smeiter at a cost of from $750 to $1,000, the surrounding country would gladly furnish more than enough ore to keep it running the year round.

If, however, one is desirous of removing to Mexico, and is without capital, there is still an opening for him. In the construction of the Mexican Northern Pacific railway, by Honorable John W. Young, there is plenty of work to be done at fair prices. Onder the orders of General Manager William Derby Johnson Jr., the contractor, Ammon M. Tenney, employs Mormons and Mexicans exclusively at the following prices: contract scraper work, from 10½ to 11 cents per yard; at day labor, man and team, $5 per day, expenses about $2.50 per day; single hand, board furnished, $1.50 per day.

Mr. J. Fewson Smith, chief of construction, is now at Chinushna to start work on the spur from that point to Guerrerro, or Conception, to the main line, and men and teams will be wanted there at once. Indeed, there is not a Mormon in the north, of whatever calling or craft, but can find in Mexico a home and employment; and jienty not enjoyed by the most favored in habitants of those regions to-day. The management of the lands and railway here is entirely Mormon, and it has been the avowed purpose of Bishop Johnson, from the time he first presented the matter to the consideration of Hon. John W, Young to give to the Mormons and Mexicans of this section all the employment and benefits the enterprises could afford.

It is fun for the angler to lay a large trout on the river bank, but a real humane person cannot help but sympathize a little with the object of his fun as he watches it it gasp its life away, a victim to the gratification of said fun. Also, is there any evil effects engendered in the flesh of the fish caused by its slow and torturous death. C. T.
